Scott Stapp, the founding member of the band Creed, topped the charts with hits “My Own Prison,” “Higher,” and “With Arms Wide Open,” songs which dominated the charts from the ‘90s through the 2000s. His soul-piercing lyrics backed by thundering rock riffs earned the band a Grammy award. Creed toured extensively, but Scott battled depression. His desire to be transparent about his struggle was part of his debut solo album, The Great Divide (2005), the Full Circle album from Creed in 2009, his memoir, Sinner’s Creed (2012), and his highly-acclaimed second solo album, Proof of Life (2013) which included Scott’s first No. 1 song on the Christian charts.

He created the “With Arms Wide Open Foundation” in 2000 to help underprivileged children and families around the world. The foundation has donated over $1 million to various causes. He is also involved with CHARM (Children are Magical), which his wife Jaclyn founded to heighten the awareness of children’s issues and provide underprivileged youth with the tools to enrich their lives.
